Board to Study Two Requests, May Act May 15

Palm Springs school teachers and administrators last night called for sweeping salary increases in proposals designed to bring the local district "up to the wage levels of other California districts."

Board of Education members were asked to elevate teachers' salaries by an average of 4½ per cent and to provide a blanket, "interim" 10 per cent pay boost for school principals.

BOTH SALARY requests were board, which took the pay pro-posals "under submission" for possible action at an adjourned meeting on May 15.

The request for teacher salary increases was brought before the board by Vernon Howeth, chairman of the salary committee for the Palm Springs Teachers Asso-

Majority of City Voters Weigh Decision Carefully

Palm Springs do not cast their ballots blindly, that their combined opinion is one of deliberate and careful consideration, and that they are seriously concerned with and solidly in favor of necessary measures to promote and assure the continued growth of the community in a safe and orderly manner was clearly evidenced in the decisive results of last week's election favoring the new municipal sewer bond proposal.

There could be no more convincing proof of the judiciousness of the voters than the complete reversal of voting trends in the past three elections on this most vital subject.

As most people here will well remember, the first two election proposals which were literally "snowed under" called for amounts ranging from three to four million dollars. Most objectionable, they included virtual blanketing of the city and compulsory connection and service fees.

In the final issue which proved so successful, thanks to the advice, planning and cooperation of a Citizens Committee, all of the unpopular and unnecessary features were eliminated and the size of the project reduced down to bare essentials at a greatly reduced cost of one and one-half million dollars.

And, as strange as it might seem to community at heart.

A cure for "sleepy" carnations has been developed by University of California scientists at Los An geles

Anton M. Kofranek and O. R. Lunt, found that potash added to the plants' diet causes flowers to perk up and sell at a higher grade than those without potash.

CAUSED BY potash deficiency in soil, the defect prevents flowers from opening properly or closes them prematurely. Most prone to sleepiness is the Pink Sim variety. Warm weather aggravates the problem.

Growers should watch the potash level in plant nutrition, says Kofranek, Potassium deficiency is indicated by tipburn on leaves Feeding frequently with liquid potash and nitrogen should prevent sleepiness.

UCLA EXPERIMENTS showed that without potash carnations developed sleepiness in 16 per cent of their flowers. There were 426 Number One flowers.

With potash, sleepiness dropped to four per cent, and 936 of the flowers rated Number One. Equal numbers and similar kinds of flowers were used in the
